the many women wipe their faces with heir silk gloves. The silk is less sanitary than kid, for the reason that sanitary than kie, for the reason that they are perforated and absorb germs, which remain in the gloves until they are washed. The act of rubbing the warm, open pores of the face with germ-laden gloves would have a decided tendency to poison the skin and cause cruptions. The hands touch averything. They hands duringled everything. They handle dust-laden things in stores, things that are handled by every one. Imagine the danger of handling veiling that has been pulled over by all sorts of people, and then rubbing your eyes with the gloves that handle that veiling. There is every possibility of contracting eye discases, as much danger as there would be from wearing one of those shop-worn, much-handled veils over the face.

Rubbing your face with your gloves is an unhealthy habit at best. A clean handkerchief should be ever ready, when the face is soiled and damp with perspiration. verything. They handle dust-laden n manners as it is to be cleanly about he body. A pretty girl may be lovely o behold, but she can spoil her appear-nce by just some such unclean habit s I have described. White silk gloves hould be washed every day. They hould never be put on if even the lightest bit soiled, and they should ever be used as powder puffs.

Remember: gloves are a useless com-nodity in summer unless used simply for protection from sin and soil.
